Michael Clonts graduated from Syracuse University College of Law with an emphasis on international, national security, and counterterrorism law: a background that serves him well in his practice of family law, where the stakes are even higher.

Mr. Clonts practices exclusively in divorce and family law, including representing clients in high net worth divorces, complex paternity and custody matters, and petitions for third-party or grandparents' rights. He also serves as a divorce and family law mediator. As demonstrated by his myriad of client testimonials, he understands that family law is very emotional for all parties and empathizes with each client's unique situation. His primary goal is to help his clients navigate the life-changing legal challenges presented by their family law cases.
